

Choices

Catholics and Calvinists are Christians.

Yet they hold different beliefs about how people achieve salvation.

In the maze below connect the beliefs that are held by Catholics and those which Calvinists hold. End in the center with the belief both share. You may want to use different colors for each path.

Catholics

Calvinists

Choices

Catholics and Calvinists are Christians.

Yet they hold different beliefs about how people achieve salvation.

In the maze below connect the beliefs that are held by Catholics and those which Calvinists hold. End in the center with the belief both share. You may want to use different colors for each path.

Catholics

Individuals rely on their conscience to determine what is right or wrong.

People gather in community as Christians only because God has chosen them.

Only the Scriptures should guide Christians

People are able to achieve salvation through faith.

Everyone has the free will to decide whether to accept Jesus Christ.

Everyone has the free will to decide whether to accept Jesus Christ.

Through predestination, God determines before birth if a person is to be saved.

Calvinists

Parents, Teachers, Catechists: Talk about these differences and the value of tradition to Catholics in addition to Scripture. What all Christians hold in common are the basic beliefs of the Judeo-Christian heritage, which include belief in the laws expressed in the Ten Commandments, the importance of Baptism, and life everlasting.